Peer Support for Young Dementia Carers Programme – A feasibility study

Principal Investigator: Dr Patricia Masterson-Algar (School of Health Sciences, Bangor University)

We have recently developed, in partnership with Dementia UK and Carers Trust a new online Peer Support Programme for Young Dementia Carers.

What do we want to achieve?

We want to find out what young dementia carers and their parents/guardians think about this new programme. We want to explore whether they found it useful or not and why.

Who can join?

- Young people age 8-16 who currently help care for a family member living with dementia (e.g., helping with household chores, companionship and emotional support). We are also inviting their parents/guardians.
- Living in Wales, England or Scotland.
- With internet access

What will happen?

Young dementia carers will try out the programme and tell us what they think. This will involve:

- Joining 8 online sessions (1 hour each), in a small group with other young dementia carers.
- Facilitated by two professionals who have experience of working with families affected by dementia and young carers.
- Saying what they think through diaries or voice recordings, interviews with researchers, and questionnaires.

About the programme:

This programme has been designed by, and for, young dementia carers aged 8 to 16. It aims to give young carers the chance to meet others in similar situations, so they can support each other, understand dementia better, and feel less alone.
